

OS Process Scheduling

Process scheduling determines the order in which processes access the CPU. Algorithms include FCFS, SJF, Round Robin, and Priority Scheduling. Context switching saves and restores process state. Deadlock occurs when processes wait indefinitely for resources held by each other. Banker's algorithm is used for deadlock avoidance. Virtual memory allows processes to use more memory than physically available.